Clay County, Kentucky, did not have clean drinking water. But it did have a group of engineering, nursing, and architecture students from the University of Tennessee, who found a solution.

Meet Volunteers who are making a difference at volunteers.utk.edu.